Snow Adventures with Grandpa

Koda couldn't wait! His grandfather was coming over to play with him in the snow at a quarter 'til one. His grandfather had lived in Alaska as a child, and was part Inuit. (Inuit people are from the cold parts of northern Alaska, Canada, and Greenland.) Koda's grandfather knew so much about the snow and had said he would teach Koda!

When his grandfather finally got there, Koda was waiting in lots of warm clothes, a snowsuit, a hat, gloves, and boots.

His grandpa led them outside, picked up a handful of snow, and felt it for a second. "Yes, I think it will be perfect," he mumbled.

"Grandpa, perfect for what?" Koda asked, excited to start.

"Let's make an igloo!" Grandpa cried with a big smile. "An igloo is a house made of snow blocks. Because of all the air trapped in snow, it stays warm inside- even when the weather is cold!"

Koda wasn't sure an igloo could really be warm, but he helped Grandpa make the blocks. When they had finally made it, Koda saw that Grandpa had told the truth- the igloo was warm inside!

Who is coming to visit Koda?

What is Koda wearing to go outside?

Where do Inuit people live?

Why does an igloo stay warm inside?

How can you tell Grandpa is excited?

When is Grandpa coming over?
